A Remarkable Surgical Operation.

An affecting and novel incident was presented in connection with the recent annual meeting of the Pacific bank stockholders, Ex-Gov. P. H. Barnett, for so many years president of the bank, arose in the course of the meeting, announced that on account of his failing health, he would not be a candidate for re-election. He further stated that indisposition had so interfered with the regular discharge of his duties as president of the bank that he had been unable to give more than half his time to his regular routine work during banking hours. He considered, therefore, that only half his regular yearly salary was due him, and asked that one-half of the salary be paid him, the balance to be placed as the directors and other officers of the bank might see fit. Mr. Barnett's wishes were overruled by his fellow-officers, who held that his services given were well worth the full salary. A check was therefore drawn for the full amount and left on the president's desk. When he opened the envelope he rose and went to the teller and drew the full amount. He then walked over to the cashier's desk and placed one-half of the sum before that officer, requesting that it be placed to the credit of the "profit and loss account." On leaving the bank he shook hands with each of the employees, but was too affected to say good-bye. (San Francisco Chronicle.)

A PRIMITIVE NATION.—The new Mexican inter-oceanic railway across the Tehuantepec Isthmus is marked out to pass through the State of Chiapas, which probably contains the only population in the world which possesses no iron, nor anything in the shape of an iron industry even of the crudest form. For the distance of eighty miles around Palenque, the capital, not a single blacksmith can be found, and the only articles in the shape of iron are axes and machetes, imported from the United States. Nails are unknown, all the woodwork being held together by the cords or tendons of the vines, and even the mortise is prepared by grinding the maize between stones. The new railway, which will run through this territory, has clearly a well defined educational as well as a commercial development to undertake.

The Winchester Sun is reminded by Dr. Tanner's feat of the case of the late Tandy Quisenberry, Sr., who, in his last illness, in 1870, lived sixty-three days with but a spoonful of water daily. The character of his disease was such that he was unable to eat, and his prolonged fast, which was followed by death, created a good deal of local interest and astonishment at the time. At the time of his death he was eighty years old, and, although very feeble through age, and fasting, retained consciousness to the last.

An exchange says: To destroy plantains, dandelions, or other weeds on the lawn, drop carefully a single drop of sulphuric acid into the centre of the plant. One drop will do the business; more will be likely to do harm. Yes, probably so, and kerosene oil will accomplish the same. We have tried kerosene on burdocks cutting them close to the ground and pouring into the hollow root-stalk a small quantity of the oil. Not a leaf started afterward.

COMPOSITE DIAMONDS.—A diamond expert of Chicago asserts that many of the so-called solitaires, sold as single stones, are made up of small stones cleverly put together. Under the blowpipe they separate. He adds the surprising statement that not one diamond in ten sold in this country is other than the refuse of the London market. Nearly all are off-colored, specked, or feathered, and are sold at a fictitious value.

THEY DESPISE EACH OTHER.—It is well known that a bitter hostility exists between Garfield and Arthur. Garfield has the assurance of Hayes and Sherman that Arthur is infamous, and Arthur has the verdict of the Poland Committee and the decision of Judge Farrell to sustain him in believing that Garfield's record will bring defeat to the party. The mutually despise each other.—[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

In Bartow county, Ga., Mrs. J. C. Sproull recently gave a barbecue to all her old servants. Invitations were duly extended, and on the appointed day eighty negroes of both sexes and of all sizes assembled on the plantation, and were feasted to their hearts' content. At night a great dance was indulged in by the negroes, and several speeches were made, and jollity and merriment reigned supreme.

H. M. Caldwell, a North Carolina horticulturist, grows stoneless peaches by grafting upon plum trees. An affecting and novel incident was presented in connection with the recent annual meeting of the Pacific bank stockholders, Ex-Gov. P. H. A Conscientious Man.

An old tradesman in a country town sends his nephew Alfred to study law at Paris. He gives him an old code annotated by a leading member of the village bar, and says to his young relative, "I will pay you a visit in March, and if I am pleased with your progress, I will give you such a trip as will make glad your heart, and cause your face to shine."

In March the old gentleman calls on his nephew. "Well, Alfred, hard at work, I see. Made good progress with your code? Pretty well through it, I expect by this time."

"Yes, my respected sir, my life has been one denunciation of your venerable friend's marginal notes I found of great service to me while laboring at the code."

"Good boy, excellent young man. You got my draft, of course? It is a pleasure for me to reflect that my bounty was not ill-bestowed."

"Your draft, sir? No; I never received it."

"Genuine that code."

The old man opens the old book and shows his stupefied nephew a draft for 2,000 francs dated five months before, which has all the time been reposing between the first two leaves of the code.

ROMANCE READING.—There is nothing good comes from the intellect alone. All true sentiments, all noble and all tender feeling, comes not of the understanding, but of the mind—or heart, if we so please to call it—which imagination raises, educates and perfects. Even feelings are to be made—more the result of education. The wisest romances will, in this respect, teach nothing wrong. It is not true that such reading enervates the mind. We firmly believe it strengthens it in every respect, by unchaining it from a low and cowardly caution. It encourages action and endurance. We have not high natures till we learn to suffer. We have seen the unromantic drop like sheep under the rot of their calamities, while the romantic have been buoyant, and mastered them.

Rev. Dr. Sims in a temperance address, said the following was what was recently said to him by a parent after one of his lectures: "I want to be the first to-night to sign the temperance pledge. I have never taken a total abstinence pledge in all my life, but I had an argument last Sunday night that I never had before, and I never expected it would come to me—they brought my boy home drunk. It is time for me to take an unequivocal position on this great question."

His Uncle's Draft.

The name of Hancock is first on the Declaration of Independence. The name of Hancock is first in the hearts of all true Democrats. The name of Hancock is first in the hearts of all Independent American citizens. The name of Hancock is the name that will sweep the country from one end to the other.

Never has a nomination fallen on the country so favorably. A young couple in their honeymoon are dallying languidly with the grapes at desert. She (archly)—"And you don't find it tiresome, dear, all alone with me? You are quite, quite sure that you don't wish to go back to your bachelor life again?" He (earnestly)—"Quite, my darling; indeed married life is so awfully jolly that, you know, if you were to die to-night I'd get married again to-morrow."
